HALLOWEEN symmetrical drawing

DID YOU KNOW?

The word "Halloween" is actually short for "All Hallows' Eve," meaning the evening before All Saints' Day.

People used to wear costumes on Halloween so wandering ghosts would think they were monsters too.

People believed turning your clothes inside out would trick mischievous fairies into leaving you alone.

Gargoyle statues were built on cathedrals because people thought stone monsters would scare real evil away.

Superstition says spilling salt brings bad luck, but throwing a pinch over your left shoulder fixes it.

Garlic became a famous vampire deterrent because its strong smell actually repels blood-drinking insects and bats in real life.
